

Horses

Horses are animals which can live on a farm or ranch. They are many different types of horses but here are three of my favourite horses: American quarter horse, Belgian horse and lipazzan horse. They are many types of horses that it is hard to write about them.

Foal

Baby horses are also known as foals. Foals are newborns until they hit the age of one. The foal title would then be taken off of them and replaced with the adult name. In the Roman times foals or adult horses were used as the engine of the chariot. They used horses as they were fast and were like a powerhouse and still are. When people sell foals they cost anywhere from 1,500 to 3,000 pounds.

Pony

Ponies are smaller than traditional horses as ponies have thicker and stronger necks, shorter legs and wider barrels. People often sell ponies anywhere from 1,000 pound upwards as sellers have their own prices for what they think people are willing to pay or what they think is a reasonable price.

As you can see horses are quite spectacular animals that have many types which makes them even more amazing to what they already are.
